As part of the collective creativity and ingenuity that go into creating a FIFA video game, we are constantly looking for ways to make soccer more playable and fun. We know that some of the most enjoyable things in this game are small, quick interactions players make with the ball, dribbling to gain space, or winding up to shoot from close range. After looking at the motion capture data from all 22 players, we recognized that there were certain movements that players often make in these small, quick interactions. We used these motions to define “HyperMotion,” which allows players to turn short, small actions into more dynamic, longer-duration actions. In the case of shooting, instead of a player simply waiting for a bouncing ball and then nailing a shot, the player can now release the ball in midair and shoot with pace and power, kick with “madness,” and more. From the moment the player touches the ball they are given their new “HyperMotion.” Players can use this technique in dynamic, natural ways that suit the mechanics and rhythm of the game. In addition to “HyperMotion” and a new dribble animation, FUT 22 also introduces the movement animation controlled by the player’s right stick. This allows players to tweak the animation to make the player more lively, agile, fast, powerful and energetic. In addition to the real-world comparisons from players, FUT 22 also incorporates statistics from the top-ranked FIFA website to make gameplay more realistic. There is no doubt that FIFA’s game engine is still as hungry and capable as the day it was unleashed. Combined with all the manual, exhaustive and creative work of the development team, this new feature is sure to enrich the atmosphere, excitement and variety that makes FIFA the most popular football simulation game in the world. If you want to follow what’s happening with FUT 22, be sure to check out @FIFA, the official FIFA FUT World Cup Instagram account. I hope to see you on the pitch next year. FIFA is the world's most popular football game and the official videogame of the international federation of football, FIFA. The game includes all the official teams and players from around the world and is played by millions of fans worldwide. FIFA is not just a game—it's a way of life. Where did it come from? In 1967, EA SPORTS FIFA debuted in a year with a lot of excitement surrounding the first game FIFA World Cup. But before then, there were no football games to play. By putting the foot on the ball and putting the ball in the net, players could score, but they couldn't do anything else. Shortly after, FIFA World Cup 1966 was released and the series took off. But EA continued to make a number of changes to the game, including the addition of virtual crowds, more gameplay elements, and also cameras. The feedback was loud and clear. People wanted more action—which is one of the reasons FIFA became EA's most popular game. We wanted to challenge the way people played football games, and we wanted to make things more fun. So that's what we've done with FIFA 17. The team at EA SPORTS has focused on improving every part of football from touch to dribble—so you can become the best player you can be. Since starting out at EA SPORTS, the FIFA team has created every game in the series. But the games weren't always the driving force behind EA SPORTS. For a company who prides itself on creating technology for a connected world, the game was a hobby. But EA couldn't ignore the fact that their game was connecting players all over the world. There were even players out there who were creating their own FIFA teams and leagues—helping to foster the worldwide community. Fast forward to today, and there are hundreds of million of players who come together to play every week. Who are the champions? No other soccer videogame company has been able to create such a passionate community. The FIFA World Cup is the most watched sporting event in the world, and the most successful game will be crowned FIFA World Cup Champion at the FIFA 17 World Cup Tournament. With the inclusion of new features like Ultimate Team, we're hoping to build on the success of this year's World Cup and deliver an unforgettable
